

Stanislaus Medical Society CME Meeting

Medicine on Trial - Following First Instincts

The Cooperative of American Physicians, Inc. (CAP) is proud to partner with the Stanislaus Medical Society in hosting a free no-obligation CME presentation.

Learn how medical malpractice lawsuits could have been avoided had physicians trusted their initial instincts when treating patients. CAP's General Counsel Gordon Ownby will discuss real-life litigated cases from his book, Medicine on Trial. All attendees will receive a free copy of his book, featuring more than 80 real-life medical malpractice case studies.

The program objectives are:

- Describe how overlooking basic risk management principles (communication, follow up) can impact a future legal dispute over medical treatment and injured patients
- Recite from case examples how a physician's early words can be key to better patient outcomes
- Discuss how a written treatment plan should also document the reasons when those plans change.
- Recognize that if not followed up, a physician's early words and orders can become an opposing attorney's script for trial.
